Segment A — Parishes Dedicated to Our Lady of Guadalupe

For parishes and shrines named for or centered on Our Lady of Guadalupe. The framing acknowledges the existing patronage: you are offering a documented image to a parish that already has a specific relationship with her.

Four emails over two weeks. Email 2 carries the provenance in detail, including what the certifications do not establish, which is the part a pastor is most likely to be asked about.

Email 1 — Introduction / authenticity

Send: Day 0 (Tuesday or Wednesday morning)

Subject: An authentic Our Lady of Guadalupe canvas for @parishname

Preview text: 24×36 rolled canvas, image from the 1998-certified digital archive of the Sacred Original, printed in the USA. Two Mexican certificates. $114 with free shipping.

Body:

Dear @firstname,

I'm writing because @parishname in @city, @state is dedicated to Our Lady of Guadalupe, and I wanted you to know about something that may be useful for your parish or ministry.

Primos Maternos offers a 24" × 36" rolled canvas reproduction of the tilma of Saint Juan Diego. The image comes from a digital archive of the Sacred Original, which Cardinal Norberto Rivera Carrera, Archbishop Primate of Mexico, certified on December 12, 1998 as a faithful reproduction. The canvas is printed in the USA on archival stock at 287.5 pixels per inch, with nothing enlarged to fill it. Both Mexican certifications come with every order, and both are published in full at primosmaternos.com/authenticity so you can read them before you decide.

$114 per canvas. Free shipping to the 50 U.S. states and Puerto Rico.

The timing may also matter to you — Pope Leo XIV has opened a Jubilee Year for Our Lady of Guadalupe, running October 12, 2026 through October 12, 2027, marking 50 years since the tilma was carried into the current New Basilica.

Email 2 — The documents themselves

Send: Day 4

Subject: The documents behind the image, and what they do not say

Preview text: Cardinal Rivera's 1998 certification and the Virgen Peregrina, both published in full for you to read.

Body:

Dear @firstname,

Following up on the canvas I wrote to you about, because the documentation is the part that usually matters to a parish, and it is the part most sellers gesture at without showing.

Two Mexican certifications are preserved with the image.

The first is dated December 12, 1998 and signed by Cardinal Norberto Rivera Carrera, Archbishop Primate of Mexico. It describes the associated print as a "reproducción fiel del archivo digital del Sagrado Original" — a faithful reproduction of the digital archive of the Sacred Original. The same document identifies Digital Color, S.A. de C.V. with the digital capture and reproduction.

The second records that the image known as the Virgen Peregrina was blessed by Pope John Paul II on January 25, 1999, and traveled throughout Mexico from January 1999 to April 2000 for the Great Jubilee.

Both are published in full, with the Spanish transcribed and translated:

The same page says what the documents do not establish, which I think matters as much. They do not mean that Cardinal Rivera examined any canvas printed since, that any canvas sold today was individually blessed, or that the Church endorses our business. Primos Maternos came under its current ownership in 2005, years after these events, and we present what survives rather than filling the gaps.

Our canvases are printed in the United States and ship rolled, at $114 with free shipping to the 50 states and Puerto Rico.

Thanks, Peace Bill

Email 3 — The image itself (value, not sales)

Send: Day 9

Subject: What the Aztecs read in the Guadalupe image

Preview text: Every fold, sash, and star was a message. A short read for your Guadalupe ministry or December 12 preparation.

Body:

Dear @firstname,

Not a sales email — just an article your Guadalupe ministry may find useful for catechesis, a bulletin insert, or December 12 preparation.

Spanish missionaries preached in Mexico for ten years before the tilma with almost no result. In the ten years after Juan Diego opened his cloak in front of the bishop, roughly nine million Aztecs were baptized. Historians of the image now understand why: to the Aztecs the image was a codex, written in symbols they read at a glance.

The mestiza face anticipating a race that didn't yet exist. Hair parted in the middle with no tie — an Aztec sign for a pregnant virgin. The black sash — the Aztec maternity belt. The four-petaled Nahui Ollin over the womb — the Aztec glyph for the presence of God. The stars on her mantle matching the actual sky over Mexico City on the morning of December 12, 1531.

Full breakdown with sources, in about seven minutes of reading:

For parishes and ministries that would like the image itself, we make a 24" × 36" rolled canvas — printed in the USA from the same 1998-certified digital archive of the Sacred Original — available for $114, with free U.S. shipping and both Mexican certifications.

Email 4 — Parish use / final CTA

Send: Day 14

Subject: Ideas for the Guadalupe canvas at @parishname

Preview text: Shrines, Dec 12 processions, Hispanic ministry, religious education, raffles — six ways parishes have used it.

Body:

Dear @firstname,

A last note, then I'll stop.

The 24" × 36" rolled canvas we make has been ordered by parishes for:

- Parish Guadalupe shrines
- December 12 processions and vigil Masses
- Hispanic ministry meeting spaces and offices
- Religious education classrooms
- Rectory and parish office display
- Fundraising raffles for the ministry

With the Jubilee Year opening October 12 and the feast day on December 12, this is a natural year to add the image somewhere in the parish that doesn't have it yet, or refresh what does.

For a parish weighing an image for a church, chapel, school or ministry space, the documentation is there to be examined rather than taken on a claim:

- Cardinal Rivera's December 12, 1998 certification of the associated print as a faithful reproduction of the digital archive of the Sacred Original
- Digital Color, S.A. de C.V. named with the digital capture and reproduction
- The January 25, 1999 blessing by Pope John Paul II of the image known as the Virgen Peregrina
- Its pilgrimage through Mexico for the Great Jubilee, January 1999 to April 2000
