Subject: An authentic Our Lady of Guadalupe canvas for your ministry

Preview text: 24×36 rolled canvas, image from the 1998-certified digital archive of the Sacred Original, printed in the USA. Two Mexican certificates. $114 with free shipping.

Body:

Dear @firstname,

I'm writing to the @contactrole at @parishname in @city, @state because your parish's Guadalupe and Hispanic ministry may find this useful.

Primos Maternos offers a 24" × 36" rolled canvas reproduction of the tilma of Saint Juan Diego. The image comes from a digital archive of the Sacred Original, which Cardinal Norberto Rivera Carrera, Archbishop Primate of Mexico, certified on December 12, 1998 as a faithful reproduction. The canvas is printed in the USA on archival stock at 287.5 pixels per inch, with nothing enlarged to fill it. Both Mexican certifications come with every order, and both are published in full at primosmaternos.com/authenticity so you can read them before you decide.

$114 per canvas. Free shipping to the 50 U.S. states and Puerto Rico.

The timing is worth noting — Pope Leo XIV has opened a Jubilee Year for Our Lady of Guadalupe, running October 12, 2026 through October 12, 2027, marking 50 years since the tilma was carried into the current New Basilica. A good year to have the image on the ministry wall or in the parish's Guadalupe shrine.

Email 2 — The image itself (value, not sales)

Send: Day 4

Subject: What the Aztecs read in the Guadalupe image

Preview text: Every fold, sash, and star was a message. A short read for your ministry or December 12 preparation.

Body:

Dear @firstname,

Not a sales email — just an article your Guadalupe ministry may find useful for catechesis, a bulletin insert, or December 12 preparation.

Spanish missionaries preached in Mexico for ten years before the tilma with almost no result. In the ten years after Juan Diego opened his cloak in front of the bishop, roughly nine million Aztecs were baptized. Historians of the image now understand why: to the Aztecs the image was a codex, written in symbols they read at a glance.

The mestiza face anticipating a race that didn't yet exist. Hair parted in the middle with no tie — an Aztec sign for a pregnant virgin. The black sash — the Aztec maternity belt. The four-petaled Nahui Ollin over the womb — the Aztec glyph for the presence of God. The stars on her mantle matching the actual sky over Mexico City on the morning of December 12, 1531.

Full breakdown with sources, about seven minutes of reading:

For ministries that would like the image itself, we make a 24" × 36" rolled canvas — printed in the USA from the same 1998-certified digital archive of the Sacred Original — available for $114, with free U.S. shipping and both Mexican certifications.

Email 3 — Ministry use / final CTA

Send: Day 10

Subject: Ideas for the Guadalupe canvas at @parishname

Preview text: Shrine, ministry room, Dec 12 procession, religious education, raffle — six ways parishes have used it.

Body:

Dear @firstname,

A last note, then I'll stop.

The 24" × 36" rolled canvas we make has been ordered by parish ministries for:

- The parish's Guadalupe shrine
- December 12 processions and vigil Masses
- Hispanic ministry meeting spaces and offices
- Religious education classrooms — especially for December catechesis
- The rectory or parish office
- Fundraising raffles for the ministry

With the Jubilee Year opening October 12 and the feast day on December 12, this is a natural year to add the image somewhere in the parish that doesn't have it yet.

$114 per canvas. Free shipping to the 50 U.S. states and Puerto Rico.

Printed in the USA. Both Mexican certifications included. Ships rolled, ready for local framing.
